14 of 15 Right Guesses Wins Contest

And the envelope, please . . . The winner, in Columbia, of the first weekly Jeanne Dixon You-Pick-Em-As-You-See-Em Award goes to Mike Klayman, 104 Clinkscales, for his performance in "College Football's First Saturday."

Klayman edged out runner-up Mike Boicourt, 1646 Towne Drive, by one point in the runoff of the Missourian's football contest. Both seers selected 14 of 15 winners in Saturday's college football games.

Although most forecasters lost out when they guessed wrong on the Georgia Tech upset of SMU and Florida's surprise victory over Houston, Klayman and Boicourt picked both underdogs.

Each, however, missed a chance for a perfect record when they selected Iowa. The Hawkeyes were defeated by Oregon State, 42-14.

To break the tie, the Missouri-Air Force game was selected for the runoff.

Klayman picked the Tigers, 17-7, and Boicourt lost by picking Missouri to win 17-6.

The uncanny foresight displayed by Klayman will earn him $15 prize, while Boicourt will be $10 richer.

This was the first week for the college football contest. The second contest began Saturday. There is an entry blank on page 4B.

Another prize was awarded (no cash involved) to Bruce Barrows, 404 North Ninth St. He received the Dan Devine Would-Have-Liked-to-Have-Known Award. Barrows was the only entrant to select the correct Missouri score, 19-17. Wouldn't Dan have felt better if he knew of Barrow's vision after the Falcons scored the go-ahead touchdown with 32 seconds left in the game?

Reporter's Feet Age Fast; Spirit Remains Dauntless

By RAY BROWN, Missourian Runner-Walker
As relayed to JUDI KLINGSICK, Missourian Staff Writer

Those walking to Memorial Stadium from a distant parking lot Saturday may have exclaimed, "I must have walked a hundred miles!" But across town at Hickman High School track, 12 walkers and one runner-walker were trying to do just that — walk 100 miles.

The 100-mile walk, the only race of its kind in the United States, is sponsored by the Columbia Parks and Recreation Department. The walkers began their circular journey at 1 p.m. Saturday and must be finished by 1 p.m. today.

Yours truly, the runner-walker, felt confident as I was leading by three laps after the first 10 miles. But after the next few miles it became clear that in a 100-mile race, a three-lap lead is as meaningless as one stroke in a swim across the English Channel.

The walking excellence of Larry O'Neil, 62, from Kalispell, Mont., was dominant even after the first 20 laps. I was just trying to get ahead of him by running so I could get a good picture of him. After a while it became clear that for every four laps, I would have to run one lap to stay even with the rugged walking veteran.

O'Neil is the only member of the American Centurian Club because he is the only person to have completed the 100-mile walk since the competition began three years ago. In 1967 he set a record with a time of 19 hours and 25 minutes. O'Neil also won last year.

O'Neil finished a 15.000 kilometer walk last week at South Lake Tahoe, Calif. He said he seems to be getting more out of shape each year, but even so he is the leader in this year's walk.

AFTER SIXTEEN MILES O'Neil said, "I am beginning to feel it a little. I am a little more out of shape than I was last year, but I'll try to finish."

I knew I could never begin to match the walking of these men so I had to resort to running to make up for it. When you feel like running, run; when you feel like walking, walk. I look at it as more of a "Go" race: Just go, by whatever means you can.

Only those who walk in the race can qualify for trophies. Trophies will be presented to the top three places and smaller trophies to all who finish.

DR. W. MERLE HILL, president of Christian College, started out the race with his usual vigor, but like many of us that vigor mysteriously disappeared during the course of the afternoon.

After about four hours and about 18 miles, Dr. Hill said, "It's tiring. I'm just taking it one lap at a time."

Dr. William Taft, professor of Well, shut my mouth. Atholl, the Air Force Academy's rare gyrfalcon, seems to have lost his cool over Missouri's last-second defeat of his masters. The victory was one that Air Force and many Mizzou fans did not anticipate in the final 35 seconds of the game. A field goal did the trick and probably caused Atholl to sing "Fly Me to the Moon," in hopes of escaping memories of the game. (Missourian Photo by Richard Bushnell)

A Weekend For Sports Fanatics

If you were a fan, you loved it. If you were not a fan, you became one. It was the type of sports weekend that usually comes in sleep, not reality.

Missouri came from behind in the closing seconds of the final quarter to defeat Air Force, 19-17. The New York Mets, who have apparently snatched the National League East title from the Chicago Cubs, were the victims of a no-hitter by Pittsburgh's Bob Moose.

Houston, highly ranked by a number of preseason seers, was overwhelmed by the University of Florida, 59-34. And not to slight tennis, the American team of Stan Smith and Bob Lutz kept the Davis Cup within the national borders for at least another year.

Radio Helps Rescue Man At Stadium

Thanks to the two-way radio equipment used by The Columbia Missourian city room, swift medical attention was brought to Donald Bingham, Jennings, who collapsed Saturday at the entrance to the southeast parking lot of Memorial Stadium after the Missouri-Air Force football game.

Charles Kyd, 2205 Route B, a Missourian reporter, was on the scene when Bingham collapsed in the crowd leaving the stadium. Kyd was carrying a two-way radio set to communicate news to the Missourian city desk.

"Someone made a noise, and I looked around and saw the man slumping to the ground. I called up Missourian Central with my radio," Kyd said.

Missourian Central relayed his message to police and the Mid-Missouri Medical Center's emergency squad, which arrived on the scene within five minutes of Kyd's original call.

Air Force cadets took charge after the man had fallen, pushing back crowds and calling out for a doctor," Kyd said.

Kyd said a doctor, who later disappeared in the crowd, administered first aid to Bingham until the hospital's emergency squad arrived.

When the emergency squad drove up, a cadet was running before it, clearing the way through the crowd," Kyd said.

A late Saturday night report from the Medical Center said Bingham is in satisfactory condition and will remain in the hospital for further observation.

Panel to Ask 'Flexibility' For ROTC

By ROBERT M. SMITH

WASHINGTON — A panel of educators and military officials, set up by the Defense Department to take the first broad look at the Reserve Officers Training Corps, is putting the finishing touches to a report recommending greater flexibility in the program.

The 65-page document asks, among other things, that both the Armed Services and the universities be more flexible in considering changes in ROTC.

Although the program has recently been controversial on several campuses, the report — which has not yet been submitted to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird — is "quite a bland" document, according to one of its authors.

The special committee, appointed in June, consists of six educational administrators, two generals and one admiral. The members were asked not to discuss the report until its public presentation, which the Pentagon says will probably be within the next two weeks.

The official reason given for their silence was that the document was still being "staffed" — being given final minor revisions and submitted to the appropriate Defense Department officials.

One of its authors said, however, that the silence could be related to a fear that the report might be "too soft" for
